Jason Bermas: Alright Folks, we are back. It's the Alex Jones show. We are honored to be joined by Alan Watt of cuttingthroughthematrix.com. How are you today, Alan?

Alan Watt: Not too bad.

Jason: Well, I want to get your take on this latest DHS document, and really just the out-of-control nature of police officers around the country. We just played that clip where this girl is trying to call 9/11 for her father. She uses the naughty F-word, God forbid she uses the F-word because she's in a panic, and she's actually hung up on by these police officers. Then she goes down four blocks to try to report this to the police department. The only officer that's on duty is the one that took her phone calls, and she's immediately arrested. I mean, what does that say about our society?

Alan: Well, we've had gradual indoctrination over twenty-odd years, maybe thirty, mainly through fictional media, entertainment, beginning even with Starsky and Hutch, which was banned in Britain at one time because they eventually started pulling their guns out on everybody they saw in every episode. But now it's standard fare. The cops are the bosses. They are the authoritarian figures, and the cops themselves come out of the same society of indoctrination, so they truly believe that they are authoritarian figures and that we're supposed to obey them. They don't get taught that they're there to serve the public anymore, and they haven't been taught that for an awful long time. And we've got to remember too, police are in the business of laying charges. That's their function. And if you call the cops for anything, I think really you're a fool. Because there's even videos up there with ex-cops who are now these lawyers, they've gone into law, stating quite openly that that's their function, is to lay charges on people. They don't care who. And they actually call, on the videos up on google, they actually call the public stupid. And they explain why they're stupid. Because the public perception is still the old perception that the cops are there to help them. Cops are not there to help you. They're there to get charges laid on anybody, for anything. It doesn't matter if you call them and they come into your house just to have a chat. If they find anything at all they can charge you with, they'll do it. And we've got to understand, that's really what their purpose is.

Jason: All right. Well, let's shift gears to this latest DHS document, Domestic Extremism Lexicon. I mean, this one, this is the third document from DHS that we've talked about, obviously the fourth if you include the MIAC Report, but right out of the gates, they say this is for non-Islamic extremism in this country, and really DHS was built up under the guise that we were going to fight Al-Qaeda and the Taliban, and we needed this new agency, but nothing could be further from the truth. This is for the American public, is it not?

Alan: Oh, absolutely. Absolutely. But then again, people who still believe that government is there to serve them, once again need to get their head checked, because that went out a long time ago. The government has an agenda, and they'll lie about everything to get a law on the books, which they intend to expand as soon as it's passed. So, absolutely, that's the whole key. We're going into a complete New World Order where we will have no rights whatsoever. They've made that quite plain. And all they need is our compliance at every stage to accept it. And then they can bring through the next part and the next part and the next part. There are no rights and freedoms anymore as far as governments are concerned. And the public are now being trained that that is so, as well.

Jason: Absolutely. And in the UK right now they have now banned 16 people from coming into the country. They're only releasing ten names. Who knows who the other six are? But this same woman is out there saying, you know what, on top of that, this ID card is great. And we can play that clip. In fact, we'll play that clip coming up, in the next segment. She's basically saying, oh, the biometric thumb scan and your face scan will be on this card, and it's a good thing, because people already have to prove who they are, and it's really inconvenient if you have to bring in your electric bill. All this nonsense. And then she says, well, it really doesn't matter anyway, because 30,000 people already have it. And by the end of the year, 70,000 will have it. Like you said, it's this incremental step into this New World Order, and I think that's a big part of it.

Alan: It's a big part. And again, it was planned a long time ago, because back in the 90s on mainstream Canadian, CBC, government television, Wendy Mesley had a show where she talked about the coming ID cards, actually it was 1998. And she talked to the manufacturers that would be manufacturing it for Canada, the US, and Britain. She talked to the border patrol guys too, who had already implemented it on a voluntary basis, back in 1998. And when she says, well, a lot of people won't like this, to the head of the corporation that prints them up and makes them, the guy said, the public will be given no option anyway. They'll have to take it. So this is a plan that was made a long time ago, and it's simply being rammed through under the guise of security.

Jason: Yeah, and meanwhile, we have the internet being regulated at all ends. We have this cybersecurity act being introduced by J. Rockefeller. We now have HR 1966 the Cyber Bullying Act, where really they say, oh, we have to save the children from the internet, with literally no statistics to support their claims. For instance, they say, 60% of mental health professionals who responded to a survey of internet mental health issues report having treated at least one patient, one, with problematic internet experiences in the previous five years. So, one person in five years had a bad experience on the internet, supposedly caused their mental illness, we know that's not the case. I think they were probably mentally ill or just put into that subsection so that they could heavily medicate them, as that's part of the plan. And then they say, 54% of these clients were 18 years of age or younger. I mean, that's just ludicrous. So, let's just shut down the internet, or let's just charge people. They're saying that they'll be able to charge people and convict them, and they'll have to do two years in prison and pay a fine.

Alan: It's much, much bigger than that, even. FDR said, he said there are lies in politics, then there are damned lies, and then there are statistics. Because with statistics, you can prove anything that you want to prove, you see, and we don't see them as lies. We think it's scientific data. That's why they're always saying it's statistics. But it's just lies none the less. They have an agenda. The internet was put out there to get everyone on it, because they could not have a totally controlled society without using the internet and getting us hooked on it for everything. Now we're going into a world cashless society. We're going into a world where you can't pay your rent, your mortgage or anything except through internet. So, eventually, if they blacklist you, you'll be unable to pay for anything. You'll be an outcast. You'll be on the streets. And they're going to use it as a form of punishment and control on the public. That's why we've got it. It's not there for our use.

Jason: So many people are out there volunteering their information not even realizing, you know, how serious it is. When you have a Facebook page, and I have a Facebook page, I have a myspace, but I'm not constantly updating. People put their status on there. They literally tell their life story, what I'm doing at this minute, that minute, this minute. They put up pictures from every event they've ever been to. I've never been a big picture hound. I don't really post that much stuff. But they are literally creating a profile on themselves that will be databased by this government.

Alan: It's already been stated by the British and Canadian governments, they're using everything that you put up voluntarily as legal evidence should they ever have to use it against you.

Jason: Absolutely. You know, I want to go and I want to play this clip of this monster of a woman who has banned against sixteen people from her country, and is gleefully talking about the coming identification cards in the United Kingdom. Hit it, Gerand.

The key words for me when it comes to the Identity Service are security and convenience. You know, let's be clear, we already wander quite often around the streets with large amounts of personal information, utility bills, passports, other information that we need to use at the moment to prove our identity. An identity card is a more secure and convenient way to do something that we're already having to do without actually sharing as much personal data as we now have to. But I think it's right as well, when we're thinking about the convenience of how you enroll your facial image, your fingerprints, both for ID cards, and incidentally for biometric passports that we make that as convenient as possible for the public. We're used in this country to having our digital photos taken for our passports in high street outlets. I believe that we can offer that opportunity to people to have their biometric fingerprints taken as well, and we can do that in a secure way, but in a way that's also convenient to people.

Well, there are 70,000, by the end of this year there will be 70,000 ID cards already in people's hands. There's already 30,000. They're helping foreign nationals to prove their right to be here. They're helping employers to be more secure that people have got the right to work. We're already having to prove our identity. I think it's the role of government to help people to do that more securely and more conveniently. And at the same time, to help people to protect their identity so that I can be confident that somebody else isn't pretending to be me, either so that they can commit crime or even terrorism, or that they can defraud me. It seems to me those are the sorts of protections that government has a responsibility to put in place for its citizens. If the Tories don't want to take that responsibility on, that's up to them. They'll have to explain it to the electorate. But for me, that's an important role of what government being on the side of the public is about.

Jason: You see, government is here to help and protect and stop terror. And she just makes up all these ludicrous lies that people are just randomly wandering around with their bills and their information and their passports. People carry their passports when they're leaving the country or entering another one. Never, I only carry my electric bill when I'm going to pay it, Alan. I mean, her arguments are absolutely insane.

Alan: Well, they're no arguments at all. It's just a political liar giving you the spiel, and that's her job. Politicians don't see the public as someone they're responsible to. They see the public as basically just a big herd that must be manipulated and lied to in order to get what's right for them, how they should behave and how they should act, etc. Back in the 90s, Canada, and the US, and all British Commonwealth countries, bought in, I mean Canada alone bought five super Cray computers. Australia did the same thing. These were owned by the Post Office, of all places, and they created massive buildings for them. No one could tell us what they were for, because one super Cray computer could handle all the data of everyone in the US and Canada, and it turns out it was for the coming ID cards that we're now hearing about. This is back in the 90s. They were already building the facilities for it. We're simply living through an agenda, and it's the politicians' job simply to con us to go along with it, thinking it's under the guise of terror.

Jason: Absolutely, and we'll be back to discuss that on the other side. It's the Alex Jones Show.

(Commercial Break)

Jason: Alright folks, we are back. This is the Alex Jones Show. I'm Jason Bermas sitting in. We're joined by Alan Watt of Cuttingthroughthematrix.com, and you know, the Bilderberg Meeting, where a lot of these elites get together and really codify their agenda, will be meeting in about one week over in, I think it's going to be in Greece this year, and we reported a couple weeks ago that I think it was Enyon Benyae, saying that they had created the Euro through the Bilderberg Group. Now, remember, the Bilderberg Group didn't exist, and then they said, oh, it's just a golf club and they don't set any policy there. Obvious lies. However, right now, and this story is over at prisonplanet.com, leaked 1955 Bilderberg documents outline plan for a single European currency almost forty years before it was codified in 1992. Now, this isn't a surprise to you or me, Alan, but it really does speak to the fact that these guys are the policy makers. They are people who believe that they are our lords, our gods, the people who should rule over us, the masses, the sheeple, the chattel if you will. I mean, those are the names they call us, and this is just a further illustration that they are the puppet masters behind the scenes.

Alan: They're certainly one of the main groups, there's no doubt about it. But even John Maynard Keynes in the mid-40s when they were setting up the Bretton Woods Agreement for the monetary system, when he said, this is Part 1, Part 2 will be a global monetary system. And he said, also too, the trading blocs that they would build up from then on, because they already planned to unite Europe during World War Two, he said that they'll bring in a unitary currency for Europe and then one for the Americas later, and also a global currency, although, he said, they wouldn't see the global currency in his lifetime, that would be the next century, which is now. As I say, we're living through a script, and when you find their old books, you have no doubt about it, whatsoever.

Jason: So, what do you think is going to be on the agenda this year at the Bilderberg Group? I mean, again, they meet in a week. In my mind, you know, there's 144 public members. So you know, it's kind of like this compartmentalized group of people, very small, and then, in another month or so, they're going to be meeting at the Bohemian Grove, when you have 3,000 people there. And those people who are at the Bilderberg Group will give their agenda to their underlings at the Bohemian Grove. So you have a system where it's a need to know system. Some people are more in the know than others and the people in the Bohemian Grove, most of them are less in the know, say, than those that attended the Bilderberg Conference. They're given an agenda. They're given a job to carry out, but they may not know why.

Alan: And also too, I think the big thing will be the true bringing up of the International Monetary Fund to its proper place. They've already admitted they're going to be the world's issuers of currency. That will be part 1, but also the biggest part 2 is also population control. Now they're really on a roll to get the public to accept they must have population reduction by government's law and order, etc.

Jason: Absolutely, and you know, we played some of those clips because we had one of those heckler callers in the beginning go, "Oh, they want to kill 80% of us." Well, those are in their own documents. And you've got Ted Turner running around saying there's already too many people on the planet and we need a sustainable society. Then we actually have the World Sustainable Society, this organization with Gordon Brown and others, including the Global Warming Czar of the Obama administration, who's openly for global governance. And in these groups they say, well, we're just going to have to take the population down. We have people talking about taking the population from the UK from, it's at 60 million officially, it's probably more like 70 million, down to 30 million by 2027. How is that going to be possible unless they sterilize everybody and kill half the population?

Alan: Well, they're already sterilizing people. They've admitted that now, it's happening. It's just a pure coincidence they were putting the very agents to sterilize us in the water and in the food, since 1950, and obviously inoculations as well, certainly helped along the way. But now they're going into, they want the right now to mandate who can breed, who cannot breed. Because, you see, it's not a matter of overpopulation, and all their statistics remember have been fudged since the days of Malthus. He used graphs and charts and fake statistics. And, but that doesn't matter, as long as the public believe it, because we must acquiesce by our silence to their demands. They want the right to literally sterilize people. And that's been in the British newspapers quite recently. So, that's really what it's all about. It's not that there's too many people; it's too many of the "wrong" sort of people, you know the ones who haven't evolved as far as those at the Bilderberger.

Jason: Yeah, they honestly believe that they should rule over us. They're smarter than us. They're more intelligent than us. And we are just, we're cannon fodder for them, and we are being groomed to be either dead or a slave race to serve them. And I don't know about you, but I'm not going to be licking any boots. I'm not going to be sucking my thumb in a fetal position just waiting for them to give me a Baxter vaccination that's going to save me from the oh so dangerous Swine Flu. Oh, no, the Swine flu is going to get us. Meanwhile, we don't have any, let me repeat this, any deaths in the United States. The two-year-old boy that died had chronic health problems. He was a premature baby. He was from Mexico. And we played you the clip where the Associated Press tries to say that Swine Flu killed this woman, and then they have to go, oh, well, actually it didn't. You know, they're falling short of that. We'll be back after this, taking your calls with Alan Watt.

(Commercial Break)

Jason: All right, folks, we are back. It's the Alex Jones Show. We're joined by Alan Watt of cuttingthroughthematrix.com. We've had some callers on for a couple hours, and I apologize for that, but we're going to take your calls right now for myself and Alan Watt. Let's go to Steven in Texas. Steven, you're on the line.

Steven: Yeah, hey, Jason, and hi, Alan. I just want to say first of all, Jason, I want to correct you on something from this guy three hours earlier. I got his real name, this heckler. His real name is, the first name....

Jason: I don't want you to give it out. We know who it is, and a lot of people who are listening know who it is. I don't want to give him more attention than he already has. You know, he hasn't called in months and months and months, but it's just ridiculous. I mean, come on, he wants to sit here and act like a child on the program, meanwhile, all we're doing is reading mainline news sources and articles and playing their own video clips with words coming out of their own mouth, Steven.

Steven: Well, I was just going to say, it's Mo, and his last name's Ron.

Jason: (Laughter)

Steven: Okay, that's his real name.

Jason: All right, I'll take that one. Yes, I agree.

Steven: Okay, thank you. I just had to get that in. But I wanted to say, I've, you know, the last couple of days, I tell you, doing the business I do, I do health insurance, and you know, it's funny, because I even had somebody from the post office call me back. I had to go down there and pick up a package because they screwed up a delivery. And so, the lady that called me, and this is what I'm doing, I'm talking now about being pro-active, because we've got this mentality, I'm only one person. What can I do? Well, there's one person that you work with there that started that whole thing, and look what's happened as a result of what Alex has done. Well, this woman from the post office, I just happened to mention to her, I said, "Hey, before you go, I just wanted to ask you, are you concerned about the economy?" And she said, "Yeah." And I said, "Well, would you like to know what's behind it?" And she said, "Sure." And I said, "Okay." And I gave her Infowars. I told her about the Obama Deception. I gave her Jason Bermas and Alex Jones. Told her when you guys are on. And she goes, you know, my husband is really into talk radio. And I said, "Well, if you're into talk radio, you definitely want to listen to these guys, and you definitely want to get a copy of the Obama Deception. And, I mean, I'm finding this more and more, Jason. People overall are more and more open to listen because of the crisis that we're in. I got a guy recently who is a good personal friend of mine, and this is what's really disappointing, but he's been an exception, where I actually emailed a link to the article on Infowars about Ashley, this kid, this sixteen year old kid, that was taken by DHS two months ago, in North Carolina.

Jason: But you've got to understand, Wired just did a story bashing Alex Jones saying it doesn't exist. Oh, he wasn't arrested under the Patriot Act. Oh, you know, you can't fake an IP address. Give me a break. They went in, in the middle of the night, jackboot cops, he hasn't been able to talk to his mother since. What else could they be charging him with?

Steven: Yeah, and the thing is, but this friend emails me back. He says, well, I appreciate you sending this to me and thinking about me, but I don't adhere to these radical views, so please don't send me any more of that kind of stuff. So, what I did, I took like over an hour, and I gave him a ton of details, because he says, "I definitely don't agree with you saying that Bush, the Bush family are a crime syndicate." And I just gave him a ton of stuff that I knew, and I haven't heard back from him since. So, hopefully, it will give him enough to think about. But overall, I found people are being more and more receptive to this message, because they know something is up, and they can see that there's something that's going down. And I tell people, if you don't wake up very soon, we're not going to have any United States of America as we know it. We're going to be under a total police state.

Jason: Absolutely, Steven. And we do have to be proactive my friend, and I thank you for the call. Let's jump to Bob in Wisconsin. Bob, you're on the line. Yes, sir. Once, twice, Bob? All right, Junior in New York, you're on the air.

Junior: How you doing? Can you guys hear me?

Jason: Yes, sir.

Junior: All right. Basically, they passed through my neighborhood the other day doing the census, and I wasn't here, but my neighbor was here. And I was curious, like, what could these GPS coordinates be for? I know that you guys are saying SWAT teams, but really they could just be....

Jason: Listen, listen, I don't want to say SWAT teams. You know, that might be something that Alex Jones has said. And, you know, obviously they can use GPS coordinates if they want to get to your house and you're off the grid and use SWAT against you if you're a terrorist, underlined in this DHS document. But, what it is, it's to create this massive control grid to document everybody's home. And that's why the Census Bureau is going to every single house and GPS-ing outside of your house, 40 feet at the least. Alan, why don't you talk about that. What do you think some of the...

Junior: Actually, I wanted to actually ask Alan, because I know he knows. I just wanted to know if he thinks that there's any possibility that they could be using these coordinates with HAARP to zap targeted houses or, you know, if they have certain people that they want to hit with the HAARP?

Alan: They can certainly do that, under the Star Wars Program.

Jason: I just want to say this, you know, they're creating a database and a control grid so they know who to go after. I don't think it has, you know, much to do with, oh, we're going to GPS everybody and now we're going to use HAARP weapons against them. No, they want to database everybody first, put you into different subcategories, see who the real threats are, see who the free thinkers are, and then take action from there. Alan, what's your take.

Alan: Back in the 70s, I talked to a guy who worked for the British Service, the Secret Service, and he told me, he had a heart attack, a young fellow, and he changed employment, and he was teaching at universities. And he just mentioned one day that shortly there will be a grid system, it's already underway, he said, set up for tracking via satellite everyone's homes. And he said, right now, and that was true at that time, we were all being trained to put down our postal codes, even though the postal codes were not used by the post office for another fifteen years. He says, we're presently training the public to always write their postal code, he says, because eventually everyone will be categorized under various codes. That's all he would say. What he really meant, I think, was political codes, etc, viewpoints and so on. So that was part of it. And that was literally 1972, so they had it all set up then.

Jason: I think this is just an extension of the control grid, don't you? I mean, they want to get people that are off the grid, they want you to be a part of this huge control grid, where they can zoom in on your house from a satellite. They know exactly where you live, who you are, and they have that data.

Alan: They have that data, and they can do flyovers too, and if they want to check out your house, they can infrared it and see what's in it, and all the rest of it. There's a whole bunch of reasons they can use it. Also remember, they're always working on the future. And in the future, for Agenda 21, depending on where you are, and which region and area you're in, and they do have regions marked down across the US and Canada, they want to get us all off, over the next fifteen, sixteen years, off the land and into the overcrowded cities. So, it would probably all tie together, many functions all in the one thing going on right now. And it will be part to do with that, as well. Also remember, they're going after, the US is just passing that law or putting that law through, where they own all water in the United States, internally. So, if you happen to be on top of a nice deep well, or something like that, they might just want that. Or they might not let you have access to your own water. There's a whole bunch of reasons that they're doing this for. It's all data collection for every facet of your life.

Jason: Well, let's say they also pass this bill, where you're not supposed to have an organic farm. It's going to be a lot easier for them once they GPS your house, realize how big it is, to just check their satellite, and say, "Oh, my God. This guy has got a Victory Garden. He's a terrorist. Lets go get him." I mean, it's a total surveillance, total control grid, and that's why they want that information.

Alan: Yes. And that was all part of the Star Wars, the real Star Wars Program was all for the future, which is now, and what's coming up, and tracking and coordinating, etc. It's all part of it, so when they come to you personally and do it in your home. Remember even the guy who reads your electric meter punches that little GPS satellite when he punches in the meter readings, he also punches in where he is. So they've been doing this for years.

Jason: Absolutely. Let's jump to Devin in California. Devin, you're on the air. Yes?

Devin: Hey, how you doing, guys?

Jason: Good. We got you? Devin? He fall off? Greg from Florida, you're on the air. Greg. Man, we just can't get these phones right.

Greg: Thanks for taking my call.

Jason: You got it.

Greg: Hello?

Jason: Yes, sir.

Greg: Hey, I just wanted to go over a few things. I was in the US military. I got out in 2004. And I'll tell you, when I went to boot camp in Parris Island, South Carolina, we had tons, like probably more than half the platoon was foreigners. And our entire platoon graduated from boot camp, including one foreigner who was on light duty the entire time. He didn't do any of the runs with us. None of the hikes with us. It was really sad.

Jason: I just want you to speak to that. Why don't you explain to people, Alan, how we are now being, our military is being integrated with NATO and foreign military forces for this new global system.

Alan: Well, under the plan for Fortress America, that was in the papers in 2005, in fact, they said that the Canadian Forces, US, Mexican, and other Latin American countries were already amalgamating. But the second part of it all was, and you've seen this in the paper too, that not only will the whole of the Americas amalgamate, we have now to amalgamate also with the European Union Community. So they're creating a new World Army. That's been in the press, in the European papers, a World Army, and every country will send members to it to be part of this World Army. So this is all part of it. It's a multi-cultural force. I think about fifteen years ago, in the Council on Foreign Relations' own magazine, Foreign Affairs, they said they'd had world meetings to discuss how to create this New World Army, because it was one thing, it was easier to get you to stand up for your old tribal emblems, your flag, etc, the songs and all that, and the uniforms, but how would they create a cohesive international army. And so they put whole groups of specialists on that particular problem at the Council on Foreign Relations. They're still working on it, to create this integrated force. And as long as they pay them very well, as always, as Stalin said the same thing, and create the brotherhood idea, that they're special, more special than the civilians, then they hope to use these techniques to bind them together into a truly international force. So, he's quite right. We're going through that now. We have been for quite a few years.

Jason: Yeah, but it's really in full force right now. We're talking about, you know, earlier today we talked about Marine Corps civilian police, and we had another military guy call in and say, yeah, a lot of my guys are getting deployed and now it's dudes who are making $14 an hour who we hire off the street, not the MPs anymore. And that's because they are first of all integrating a police state here at home. They're trying to blur the lines between the military and the police. They're trying to get rid of posse comitatus, and they're getting us ready for global government and a global military force that you're going to see at the national level exercise, '09, coming up at the end of July into the beginning of August, headed by FEMA. You know, working with the UK, Australia, Canada, and Mexico in a terrorist prevention act like no one has ever seen. This is the first drill to prevent terror after terrorism occurs in another country. Let's jump to our next caller, Ann in New York, you're on the line.

Ann: I just want to say that I'm new to you. And I'm so proud that you are doing what you're doing, that there's a place, that there's a voice that we can hear that is just focusing on what is really going on.

Jason: Well, thank you.

Ann: And thank you. I want to touch on three things. I'm going to be real quick. I'll share this with you. I have two different passports plus a Green Card. And I was recently robbed and I had to go and get my state ID back. Now, I got my state ID originally four years ago. And when I went to get it back they have now added something to the form in New York City, which makes you divulge whether you have ever had a Canadian driver's license, if you have an active one, and it makes you put down your drivers license number on this form.

Jason: Well, right now, Canada is enforcing a new ID system, where, if you take the new ID card, I think they're going to be issuing them on June 1st.

Ann: Well, yes, but this is in the States, in America.

Jason: Yeah, I understand that, but they're trying to blur the line. They're trying to create this North American Union. So, if you take your RFID, National ID card in Canada, then you won't have to wait on the border. You'll just have your thing, "Oh, you've got your card. Go ahead." And they're going to do the same thing in Mexico and America. They want to integrate this into a new system. And that was exposed in the Security and Prosperity Partnership Agreements. Why don't you speak to that really quickly there, Alan.

Alan: Yes. And also the EU have said that they have a central computer with all the data of Canadians and US citizens who have that card. So it is in actual fact international, it's your international ID card. They even said that in it, it could go under the guise of a license; it didn't matter. It is the international ID card.

Jason: Exactly. Ann, what else have you got for me?

Ann: It's here. And that's the frightening part. And you know, I'm just so glad that you're alerting more and more Americans. And this bill HR875, how realistic is that? I mean, I've sent letters to the New York Times, to Eden Foods, to every organic group that I can think of. And any response I've gotten back from organic farmers is that they've never even heard of this.

Jason: Well, that's absolutely correct. They haven't heard of it, and they're keeping it on the low, but it's as real as it gets. They always talk about it, after they've passed some kind of legislation towards it. They have programmed us to think that GMO foods are going to save us and you don't need organic farming. In fact, organic farming is bad, because it doesn't go through the proper processes, and that's the reason we have swine flu and bird flu outbreaks and people are unhealthy. Meanwhile, these GMO foods are set out to destroy our immune systems, to really hurt us, to sterilize us. Speak to that, Alan.

Alan: There's no doubt about it. And I read from their own articles, the big players on depopulation agendas, and I keep asking the public, what do you think they mean by that? Just a wish list of things they'd love to do at Christmas time and Santa Claus and that? They actually implement them. You cannot ask for volunteers, so you simply implement them. And you're quite right for the GMO food. I mean, look at all the guys behind Obama. He's even got guys there who worked for Monsanto on his staff there, and in fact, they put the bills forward for this particular one. And we've had it from the Economic Union. We've had it from Britain, from all the Prime Ministers. They want the GMO to be the sole ruler basically food-wise for the whole planet. That's the way it's been mandated. That's why no one can sue Monsanto anywhere. That's why doors open for Monsanto, and judges know to leave them alone. It's a must-be, because, as far as I'm concerned, you see, food comes under military-industrial complex. It's the oldest trick in the book. Control the food or the water, you control the people. Therefore, Monsanto is part of the military-industrial complex.

Jason: Absolutely. And Ann, I hope you look into Codex Alimentarius. There's a lot of scary things within that. I thank you for the call. Let's jump to Johnny in Indiana. Johnny, you're on the line. Yes, sir.

Johnny: Hello, Jason. Can you hear me?

Jason: Yes, sir.

Johnny: I wanted to comment about the Ashton Lumby case. It's here in my town, in Southbend, Indiana, and I heard about it on your show, and I became actively involved in her case. And I brought it to the attention of all my media outlets. And it created such an outcry that the US attorney had to respond with a press release.

Jason: And what did they say?

Johnny: They downplayed it. They commented on the charges. And I talked to Annette at least three times a day, since I heard about the case. And they commented on what he was being charged with. And they said, she had access to her child but never bothered to go see him.

Jason: You know, again, you know, I've got to know more about this case, but I don't think it's right that you come in, in the middle of the night, you pick up a sixteen year old kid because of a supposed bomb threat. The kid seems to have an alibi. The mother is telling a different story from what the authorities are telling. You know, time will tell whether this pans out or not. And you know, I encourage people to go check into it themselves. Let's jump to Bill in Connecticut, you're on the air.

Bill: Yeah, Connecticut. What's you doing, Jason?

Jason: How you doing, sir?

Bill: Good. Hey, a couple of things, pertaining to HR875. I was just trying to find it here, because I was just going to email it over to you, but I actually got a response back from Jim Hymes pertaining to that, because La Ros, what's her name, Dellarosa? Rosa Deloro, was the woman who tried to put that out. And I thought it was interesting, because in his response, he was basically saying that she was not married to one of the guys that actually works at Monsanto, his name's Greenberg.

Jason: But she is married to this guy, right? Hold over on the other side. We'll be back after this. It's the Alex Jones Show. We're with Alan Watt, cuttingthroughthematrix.com.

(Commercial Break)

Jason: All right folks, we are back. It's the Info Warrior with Jason Bermas. I'm just kidding, it's the Alex Jones Show. But I do a show called that, and I'll be live on the air tonight, 9pm until midnight. We're going to be going over a bunch of news. We just got one of the Census forms, so I'm going to be hitting that up. I missed so much today, including, let me see, 666, Goldman's latest bonus bears the Mark of the Beast. Klaus vetoes Czech Republic approval of the Lisbon Treaty. Protein Sciences enter deal to run vaccine factory in Mexico. And much, much more, including this Web 2.0 summit that I wanted to talk about today as well. We've got Alan Watt of cuttingthroughthematrix.com on the line, and Bill, continue.

Bill: Anyway, I just emailed that to Rob Dee. So, I emailed you the copy of the letter that I had gotten from Jim Hymes. But he was basically sitting there saying, you know, he doesn't, he isn't going to vote this down, so on and so forth, but he actually did address that thing in there pertaining to her husband. I called his office.

Jason: Well, whether they're related or not, this is a bad bill. We should be able to...

Bill: Oh, it's awful.

Jason: Oh, it's an awful bill, you're right. It's off the charts awful, and we do need to oppose it. I thank you for the call, Bill. Alan, what are your closing thoughts on this bill? I mean, a lot of people are obviously concerned. You know, we don't want Monsanto in charge of our food consumption, do we?

Alan: No, but I think, to be honest with you, it already is. Monsanto, Archer Daniels Midland, and a few others, there's five of them altogether, were set up to take over and be the big agribusiness companies for the entire planet. They're in every country across the planet, doing the same things at the same time. And we've had top politicians, prime ministers come out in Europe saying that they're going to make it, give it a complete go-ahead to be GMO, everything GMO. The United Nations, remember, at their Department of Agriculture, said when they were set up, that their job eventually was to distribute all food across the world to every Bloc. That's the US Bloc, the European Bloc, etc. And they said that that will be used as coercion to bring down their populations. You won't get more rations if you have more population. They'll simply reduce it. So, it's used as a weapon. And the woman who was in charge of the UN at that time, for that department said that, "Food has always been used as a weapon." We've got to understand it still is. And the old ideas of freedom and being self-sufficient are under the hammer, because in an interdependent world, and what they mean by interdependence is right down to personal interdependence. It means you will be dependent on them and their system for everything that you need to live. It's as simple as that.

Jason: Exactly. No more individualities. No more individual human rights. And that's why they put that in that WHO document, so that they can quarantine you, vaccinate you, and kill you if they want. That's the bottom line. Alan Watt, thank you for joining us. The website is cuttingthroughthematrix.com.
